

PROCLAMATION.

Fellow Citizens of Annapolis,

It becomes my duty as Mayor of the city, to communicate to you a resolution of the corporation recommending to you an illumination of your houses To-morrow evening, in honor of the Heroes who have bravely supported your independence by land and sea, and procured for you an honorable peace. A signal gun will be fired, that all persons may commence lighting at the same moment, and you are particularly requested to extinguish your lights at nine o'clock.

You are particularly requested to observe the strictest order. If any person should decline the illumination, no violence must be offered to his person or property.

NICHOLAS BREWER,
Mayor.

February 17, 1815.